Biographical/Historical note

Frederick Augustus Porter Barnard was born in Sheffield, Massachusetts, in May 1809. A graduate of Yale University in 1828, he joined The University of Alabama faculty in 1837, where he taught mathematics, chemistry, natural sciences, and philosophy until 1854, when he left for the University of Mississippi. He was chancellor of the University of Mississippi from 1856 until the beginning of the Civil War, when he returned to the North. He was president of Columbia College (Columbia University) from 1864 until the late 1870s, shortly before his death in 1879. Barnard supported women's education, and Barnard College was named in his honor.
